

Marigny Bostock

Marigny Bostock is a Community Health Specialist at the Louisville Metro Department of Public Health & Wellness. She has coordinated the Mayor's Healthy Hometown Movement since 2007 and currently serves as the Project Director for Louisville's Healthy Kids, Healthy Communities project. Marigny also worked as a Program Evaluator for the Urban Nutrition Initiative housed at the University of Pennsylvania's Center for Community Partnerships in Philadelphia in 2006. She was the Program Director for the Greater New Orleans Senior Olympics from 2003-2005 while studying at the University of New Orleans (UNO). Prior to obtaining masters in Human Performance and Health Promotion at UNO, Marigny worked at Tufts University as a Research Assistant for two health-monitoring studies for children in Boston, MA. She is a Certified Health Education Specialist (CHES) and is also an alumna of Guilford College in Greensboro, NC where she studied Sports Medicine and Biology.